Protocol & Lifestyle Titles

My Lady Beth and I like to say, "we are here only for what we consider to be the good/fun parts of the lifestyle". We avoid "drama" and only use what we consider to be established lifestyle protocol where we feel it enhances our relationship and interactions in the community.

One of the forms of protocol that seemed to come naturally to us, Beth more so than me, was the use of capital letters for me, and a title of "Sir" than "Master" after our formal collaring ceremony, and lower case for her name (beth). This just felt right to us and helped reinforce our D/s relationship.

As our relationship grew and strengthened beth also grew and gained confidence in our relationship and herself. This continued until she reached a point where I just naturally felt it was appropriate to refer to her as an "alpha submissive", based on her interactions with other submissives and people in the lifestyle.

This weekend I realized Beth and our relationship had reached a new level. Meaning it was time for another change, one which makes me even more proud than the one where I truly felt she had become an "alpha submissive". Now I am so proud to say she has grown to the point I feel she is an "alpha submissive" only to me. To everyone else she is a "Domme" or equal and will from this point forward refer to her as "Lady Beth" (with capital letters for those of you that follow that and/or practice that form of protocol).
